Statistics record show that the population of 1998 was 10,635 with an estimated population of 11,250 in the year 2000, based on Socio-Economic Profile of Bacolod City but due to the demolition project of the Provincial Government and the Coscolluela property the population decreases as per survey of the National Statistics Office and the latest population survey is 2,050.

Barangay #8, once known as "Punta Capri" to the many, long before and after the World War 11, was a place of peace and serenity. Once a swampy place occupied by mangroves and coconut trees, it was inhabited by its landowners, the Cordova clan, relatives and friends, Squatter houses scattered and distantly located that one could really enjoy the beauty of nature. It was also where the old government cottages were built that served as home for government officials working with the Province of Negros Occidental. Most part of the area was devoted to a Plant Nursery belonging to the old Bureau of Forestry, now the Department of Environment and Natural Resources. It was then where the office of the Bureau of Soil and the Bureau of Animal Industry were located. Here, you will find a night spot called Tulahan sa Pala-pala, where people from all walks of life, and even celebrities, come to buy fish and sea foods and had them cooked in the native in the native cuisine, like sinigang, grilled, steams and even steaks.

During the Martial Law years, migrants from the highlands went down to the city for security reasons and those seeking for a job opportunities. Some would –be students, after landing a job eventually settled down for good in the City. It was also the time when Punta Capri was flourishing and increasing in population. As the growth rate of population increases, the problems regarding peace and order surfaced. Gang wars erupted among neighboring puroks and sitios. And it was during the martial law years when our government gave emphasis and importance to the role of Barangay as the smallest government unit.

After Martial Law, Barangay 8 was headed by the late Quintin Sevilla Sr. as the first Barangay Captain and followed by Estrella Fontanilla who defeated him and later won as the Bulawanon Awardee.

The 3rd Barangay Captain who headed Barangay 8 was the late Francisco Doctora Sr., upon the administration of the late Francisco Doctora Sr., the collegial government system takes place, it was the late Antonio Burgos, 1st Barangay Kagawad obtains the position as the Barangay Captain but unfortunately he did not finish his term and come home with our Creator and by the role of succession, Aurora Santander took over his position and served the barangay for more than 15 years and ended her probationary period last 2007. Until the landowners needs their property and they had to demolish illegal occupants. Last quarter of the year 2004, six (6) puroks of Barangay 8 was demolished and relocated to Kabugwason and lately last September, 2007 Purok Narra Baybay was demolished and relocated to Abada-Escay, today Purok Fire and portion of Purok Narra Baybay and portion of Purok Pili was left. Presently, Barangay #8 is headed by its newly elected Barangay Captain of Punong Barangay, Mylene C. Dewara, who won the October 29, 2007 Synchronize Barangay & SK Election. And very fortunate in her political career she surfaced the 2010 and 2014 Barangay election, as her last term in government service as Barangay Captain. And being the Barangay Captain and in coordination with the members of the Barangay Council, the deliveries of the much-needed basic services were made visible to the constituents of the Barangay up to present.

To this date, 888 Chinatown Square Annex Building, Amaia Steps Bacolod and Ayala Land Inc. has started constructing their propose business and project in Barangay 8 which is a residential condo unit and a five story mall. Soon when the projects finished and the business starts to operate it will be a great help to the Barangay and its constituents in general. It would bring back the Barangay to life. Barangay 8 residents who are qualified for job opportunities and vacancies will be given priority. And when it pursued, the RPT and IRA share of Barangay 8 will also increase and the delivery of basic services that the constituent wishes will be more visible. On April 14, 2018...Punong Barangay Mylene C.
